

The North Eastern Region of India is geographically and strategically located. With the region being a biodiversity hotspot and many tribal communities inhabiting the region, there is much to be understood about the region. Research can be a way of understanding the way of life, issues faced by the communities in the region and lessons to be learned from these communities.

This year, the School of Social Work of the University invites Post Graduate and Undergraduate Level students to present papers at the Regional Seminar on the Theme: Contemporary Issues in North East India. There are no subthemes as the subjects can be varied and can cover wide variety of subjects within the broader theme. Also, this will encourage students from various disciplines to participate.

Who can participate?

Final/Outgoing Under graduate and Postgraduate students of any discipline
